

Criterion	Excellent (4)	Good (3)	Acceptable (2)	Insufficient (1)
Creativity of the Story (10 points)	The story is original, captivating and shows a strong link to the daily tasks of a 4-5 year old. Exceptional imagination is demonstrated.	The story is engaging and shows connection to the child's daily tasks, although it could have benefited from some more original ideas.	The story is adequate, but it lacks originality and fails to fully capture the children's attention.	The story lacks creativity and connection with daily tasks, not generating interest.
RobotTheyWorkWith Programming (15 points)	The programming sequences are clear, precise, and accurately reflect the child's daily actions in the story. All instructions are correct.	The sequences are effective and largely follow the actions of the story, with some slight inaccuracies. Most of the instructions are correct.	The sequences are understandable, but some instructions are inaccurate or unclear, which affects the execution of RobotTheyWorkWith.	The sequences are confusing, incorrect or insufficient to represent the daily tasks of the story.
Task Design (10 points)	The tasks designed for RobotTheyWorkWith are varied, challenging and integrate perfectly with the story. They encourage the active participation of children.	The tasks are appropriate and related to the story, although some could have been designed in a more exciting way.	The tasks are basic and meet the minimum requirement, but they lack creativity.	The tasks are irrelevant, unattractive, and do not contribute significantly to the story experience.
Presentation and Participation (5 points)	The presentation is clear, organized, and demonstrates obvious effort. The active participation of children in the activity reflects positively.	The presentation is adequate, but it could have been improved in terms of organization or participation. Some degree of participation of children is observed.	The presentation is limited in clarity or organization. The participation of children is minimal.	The presentation is confusing or disorganized, and children's participation is negligible or non-existent.
Global (30 points)	The presentation is exceptional, meeting and exceeding all the established criteria. It shows a deep and creative understanding of the project.	The presentation is good and meets the established criteria in a solid way. Demonstrates understanding of the project, although with certain aspects that can be improved.	The presentation is acceptable, but there are significant areas that could be improved. Understanding the project is basic.	The presentation is insufficient and does not meet the established criteria. Shows lack of understanding of the project.